The project in short

What are we talking about?

Welcome to the Good Job Project Newsletter!

If you are a new reader, here is just a quick summary of the project:

Good Job aims to equip educators with tools and strategies to support and empower young people with learning difficulties or disabilities. Our primary focus is on developing competences, addressing challenges, and enhancing employability. Stay with us and enjoy the journey!

Best regards,
The Good Job Team

Some suggestions for support

Every young person deserves the chance to grow, learn, and find their place in the world of work — including those with disabilities and learning difficulties.

From supported internships and vocational training programmes to mentorship schemes and inclusive employment services, new pathways are opening for transitioning learners. When these opportunities are personalised, accessible, and supported by skilled mentors, they can make a real difference — building confidence, independence, and long-term employability.

Across Europe, there are several initiatives and frameworks supporting the transition from school to work for young people with disabilities — yet access remains fragmented.

The European Agency for Special Needs and Inclusive Education promotes the concept of "transition planning as a process, not an event", and supports Member States in developing coordinated strategies.

Meanwhile, Erasmus+ and national programmes fund projects like Divee, Accessible Work 4 All, and InclusiVRity, focusing on mentoring, digital skills, and inclusive workplaces.

Meeting in Turin

In September 2025, all partners gathered in Turin for our last transnational meeting. Hosted by Ergon, the meeting was an opportunity to finalize and share progress about our results and to prepare for the last sprint to the finish line. We also had the chance to engage with the EU green Project members, which was a perfect opportunity to share good practices and form new alliances.

“Everybody is a genius. But if you judge a fish by its ability to climb a tree, it will live its whole life believing it is stupid.”

Two new tools available!

Over the past few months, the GOOD JOB! partnership has finalised the Coaching and Mentoring Programme and is currently conducting national testing. IN our last newsletter we will update you on these pilotings. In the meantime, check out the training program on our website

The Transition Mentor Toolkit is now available!

It is a practical and easy-to-use resource. The toolkit includes planning templates, checklists, guidance on inclusive practices, and examples of workplace adaptation. It encourages collaboration among schools, families, and job services — because inclusion is a shared responsibility!

Enjoy our toolkit and spread the word!

The Starter Kits

What are our final steps?

We're now preparing the final deliverable of the project: the GOOD JOB! Starter Kits. These three open-access packages will bring together all project resources in one place — ready to use, adapt and multiply.

The Starter Kits are intended for all those persons that find the project interesting and want to implement it in their own working environment or school.

It will include:

- Guidelines and tools from the project
- Templates for assessment and planning
- Recommendations for implementing inclusive transition programmes
- Good practice examples
